

The team met to review and discuss the researched frontend technologies. Pros and cons of each option were compared, and feasibility was considered in relation to the project timeline and team experience. After discussion, the team agreed to use Next.js with React as the frontend stack, and the decision along with its rationale was documented.