For this story, the team focused on setting up the initial development environment. The project repository was cloned successfully, required dependencies were installed, and environment variables were configured using placeholder values. The application was then run locally using npm run dev to confirm that the setup was working correctly and that all team members could run the project without issues.

Photo of a successful run: